

1. Is the GWC coaching students virtually during the COVID-19 pandemic?

Writing coaches support students virtually in three capacities: live coaching, asynchronous coaching, and Friday write-ins. Read about the coaching process and how the GWC works with distance learners.

Many coaches are now available for in-person appointments. Check WCOonline for the most up-to-date coaching schedule.

2. When is the GWC open for virtual coaching?

The GWC is open for some form of coaching every day. Check the current hours for each of our online services.

3. How do I sign up for coaching?

Sign up in WCOonline from here or via our homepage SIGN-UP button. Select or note in your appointment form what types of issues you want to work on; this guides our review of your work.

4. How do I get my draft to my writing coach?

Email your paper or thesis chapter to your coach 24 hours in advance for a live appointment or 48 hours in advance for an asynchronous appointment. You can find your coach's email in Outlook and on your WCOonline appointment form.

5. Does the GWC have drop-in hours in the library?

GWC coaches are available at the Dudley Knox Library drop-in desk Monday–Friday, 1100–1300. (These hours may be affected by library closures.)

6. Do the GWC and DKL still offer workshops?

The GWC and DKL offer more than two dozen workshops within the first four weeks of each quarter. Visit our workshops page to view current offerings. You can also access our recorded workshops any time.

7. Where else can I get expert help on writing topics?

Visit the GWC Resources pages, which list more than 100 topics individually and thematically. The pages contain essential rules and guidance, handouts, video links, and books held by the library. You can also visit Quick Clips & Tips for videos, infographics, and other online tutorials on writing- and research-related topics.

8. Can I still get iThenticate plagiarism checks run by the GWC?

Yes, make a coaching appointment in WCOonline and request this service in your appointment form.